Lorenzo Fernandez (1897-1948)

Born in Brazil but with Spanish descent, Lorenzo Fernandez was a student of Francisco Braga and Henrique Oswald in Instituto Nacional de Música (National Institute of Music) where he became a professor. He was director and one of the founders of Conservatório Brasileiro de Música (Brazilian Conservatory of Music). His works were genuinely nationalists but without any resemblance to folklore. He was characterized by particularly elegant harmonic writing.

He composed pieces for piano, voice, accordion, acoustic guitar, symphonic orchestra, and a combination of the above.

Claudio Santoro (1919-1989)

Claudio Franco de Sá Santoro (Manaus, 23-11-1919 - Brasilia, 27-03-1989) was one of the most restless and versatile musicians of his time. Boy prodigy, inspired creator and brilliant interpreter, dynamic organizer, lucid educator and researcher, he developed national and internationally intense activity as a composer, conductor, professor, organizer, administrator, article writer, jury member, Brazilian representative in conferences and international organizations, being invited by several Governments and foreign institutions.

Camargo Guarnieri (1907-1993)

Mozart Camargo Guarnieri was born in the State of São Paulo, Brazil. He was the fourth child of a family wholly names in homage to great composers (Rossini, Bellini, and Verdi). He started music lessons with his father, and later at the Dramatic Conservatory of São Paulo. At age 21, he had Mário Andrade as his mentor for nationalistic aesthetics.

He became well known in different parts of the globe, and one of the people that enjoyed his works was Aaron Copland. He wrote:

"Camargo Guarnieri is in my opinion the most exciting 'unknown' talent in South America. His not inconsiderable body of works should be far better known than it is. Guarnieri is a real composer. He has everything it takes - a personality of his own, a finished technique and a frecund imagination. His gift is more orderly than that of Villa-Lobos, though nonetheless Brazilian. [...] What I like best about his music is its healthy emotional expression - the honest statement of how one man feels. [...] He knows how to shape a form, how to orchestrate well, how to lead a bass line effectively. Most attractive in Guarnieri's music is its warmth and imagination, which are touched by a deeply Brazilian sensibility. At its finest, his is the fresh and racy music of a 'new' continent."

Significant Living Composers: (mentioned in the lecture-recital)

Edino Krieger (1928-)
Ronaldo Miranda (1948-)
Edson Zampronha (1963-)
Marlos Nobre (1939-)

Heitor Villa-Lobos (1887-1959)

He is one of the foremost Latin American composers of the 20th century, whose music combines indigenous melodic and rhythmic elements with Western classical music. While traveling with his family to various regions of the vast country, he developed an interest in native Brazilian folk music. He was also interested in Brazilian Popular Music as well as classical music.

In 1919 he met the pianist Artur Rubinstein, who helped advance Villa-Lobos’s reputation by playing his music in concerts throughout the world. He composed ceaselessly (about 2,000 works are credited to him in all), and by the time of his first trip to Europe in 1923 he had produced a long list of compositions in every form, from solo pieces for guitar to trios, quartets, concerti, vocal music, and symphonies.
